BYU students can forget about a 5-day weekend

Education Week, faculty conference and freshmen orientation all prevent the university from starting school early to compensate for a Wednesday before Thanksgiving holiday.

AMNA LARKIN
Universe Staff Writer

Until the Earth's orbit increases the number of days in November, Brigham Young University will not be able to give students another day to get home for Thanksgiving.

For over 10 years we have struggled with how we could squeak out another day for students to enjoy a longer Thanksgiving holiday.

"We have to involve the whole year when we take into account the number of days students are allowed off at Thanksgiving," said Ronald A. Bybee, BYU academic scheduling officer.

Bybee said that while the university has a long history of scheduling Thanksgiving off, it is not always possible to have a full day off. He said that the university has a long history of scheduling Thanksgiving off, but it is not always possible to have a full day off.

Students are allowed off at Thanksgiving, Bybee said. When taking into account the whole year, the number of days off are limited because BYU is a trimester school, requiring students to complete three semesters per year, Bybee said.

Bybee said it would not be possible for BYU to start classes earlier to allow for more days off, as does Utah Valley Community College.

Right after summer term, during the third week in August, the LDS Church hosts a spiritual conference called Education Week, considered a priority for church members," Bybee said.

During the fourth week, a university conference is held from Monday to Wednesday. During this conference, faculty and administration are given a course review and instruction. Freshman orientation is held Thursday through Saturday, which we think is critical for new freshmen," he said.

Another important factor includes being accountable to an accrediting agency that specifies BYU hold 70 class days every semester, said Brent Harker, university spokesman and associate director of public communications.

UVCC is accountable to the same accrediting agency as BYU, said Karl Worthington, associate vice president of academic affairs for UVCC. Although UVCC lets their students out for Wednesday classes, they have to start their fall semester three days before BYU to satisfy their requirement to hold 73 class days each semester, he said.

"It is great to be able to go home early for Thanksgiving, but we had to make up the days before BYU started so we really aren't getting off that easy," said Trista Larkin, 18, a freshman at UVCC majoring in elementary education, from Layton.

BYU is not the only university that will hold classes on Nov. 25. Weber State University and the University of Utah will also hold school on Wednesday.

When asked about their attendance policies, both Larry Weist, director of news for the University of Utah, and Ron Cantera, spokesperson and director of public communications for Weber State University, said BYU faces a different problem.

"We hold school on Wednesday because most of our student body live in-state," Cantera said. "Therefore, there is no real need to let students out early in order to drive home. This is a different situation than BYU faces."

"Around 99 percent of our students live within 20 to 30 miles of the school," Weist said.

At BYU, "Christmas is our focus for going home," Bybee said. "Although we hold Thanksgiving as an important holiday, we don't encourage students to go home because they are in the middle of their studies."

BYU sacrifices the Thanksgiving holiday so students can have a longer Christmas holiday, Harker said.

"It is a matter of choice," Harker said. "We have a four-day weekend — students could even have Thanksgiving dinner on Friday."

Roya Farvid, 20, a junior majoring in elementary education from Glendale, Ariz., agrees with the BYU policy of holding classes on Wednesday.

"I think holding classes on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving is appropriate," she said. "If the administration lets the students off Wednesday this year, next year we will be asking, 'Why not Tuesday?'"

BYUSA says 3-year campaign has helped stop traffic deaths

But some students find 'scare tactics' like smashed cars distasteful.

By MATTHEW S. FRANCK
Universe Staff Writer

BYUSA hopes students who travel "over the river and through the woods" for Thanksgiving this week will do so safely.

Now in its third year, the organization's "Survive the Long Drive" program is aimed at raising student awareness on the dangers of long holiday road trips.

BYUSA executive program director Chris Marocchi, 25, a senior from Danville, Calif., majoring in advertising, said the program has an added importance this year in light of the recent deaths of two BYU students who were killed driving home from a concert in Las Vegas.

"It's ironic the deaths came only two weeks before the program starts," Marocchi said. "I wish the students could have gotten our message beforehand."

Marocchi says he is encouraged by the fact that since the implementation of the program, no BYU students have died on the highways during holiday season.

While he recognizes "Survive the Long Drive" is not the sole reason for the lack of deaths, Marocchi is confident the program's message makes a difference.

The program's clean record follows five straight years in which each holiday season was accompanied by at least one student highway fatality.

Dean of Student Life Maren Mouritsen said her responsibility as the individual in charge of contacting parents when students do not make it back to BYU compelled her to take action.

Mouritsen said after unsuccessfully attempting to raise awareness in freshman orientations, she spoke with BYUSA officials, suggesting they place demolished vehicles on campus to remind students of the grave consequences of unsafe driving.

While some students have criticized the program's use of wrecked cars as a distasteful scare tactic, Marocchi said the automobiles serve as a "powerful visual image" and enhance the effectiveness of the project.

In addition to the smashed cars, BYUSA is using several other methods of informing students this week.

Marocchi says BYUSA officers plan to flood the campus with advertisements, pamphlets, posters and fliers, while also placing two billboards, just outside Provo on I-15, as a last reminder to students to drive carefully.

The literature will include a list, circulated around the university last year, of 101 ways to stay awake while driving for extended periods of time.

The list drew controversy last year, because some said it encourages students to stubbornly fight off drowsiness rather than switching drivers or simply pulling off the road.

David Adams of University Police said students should take precautions to avoid drowsiness before they even put their key in the ignition so falling asleep isn't an issue later in the trip.

Adams suggests traveling during the day, never alone and with a fixed schedule of driver rotation.

Adams will man a booth in the ELWC Stepdown lounge for "Survive The Long Drive" all this week. At the booth he will counsel students on how to make their trip a safe one.

What are you thankful for?

"Since this is my first Thanksgiving back in my country since my mission, I'm glad to be able to share with my family."

— Charlene Brown, 23, a senior from Vidor, Texas, majoring in music

"My husband."

— Gina Wescott, 23, a senior from Bountiful majoring in statistics

"A wonderful home."

— Matt Palmer, 18, a freshman from Landing majoring in theater arts

"I'm thankful for Heavenly Father and Jesus Christ, my family, my country, my life and my brother."

— Kevin Barney, 22, a sophomore from Las Vegas, Nev., majoring in pre-med.

"There's so much. I'm thankful for the gospel. Everything is included in that."

— Steve Garvin, 25, a sophomore from Bothell, Wash., majoring in electrical engineering

"I'm thankful for clean sheets and the fact that an LDS institution will allow a Democrat to be on the faculty."

— Ross Mouritsen, assoc. professor broadcast communications

"For Thanksgiving."

— Cara Bradford, 20, a senior from Mapleton majoring in chemistry

Tornadoes strike with surprise attack

Tornadoes ripped through parts of the South during the night, killing 16 people, leveling houses and uprooting trees and utility poles. "It's unbelievable. We're lucky we didn't lose more lives than we did," said W.L. Whittington, mayor of Brandon, Miss. Ten people were killed in and around the town.

Tornadoes killed 15 people and injured at least 150 in Mississippi late Saturday and one person was killed early Sunday in Tennessee. Thunderstorms and tornadoes also caused damage in Alabama and Georgia. Tornadoes were reported Saturday in Texas and Louisiana.

In Brandon, a tornado smashed through a mobile home park and then skipped across town to an upscale neighborhood, where it killed three Cub Scout buddies enjoying a weekend sleep over and the father of one of the boys.

Mike Wood, who lives on a hillside about a half-mile away from the Brandon mobile home park, described the scene. "I can see for about a 500-yard radius and all I see is devastation all around us. I don't think anything will be salvageable on that (trailer) lot. There was a church on Highway 468 that is gone. It's just a slab," he said.

Electronic college applications a reality

WASHINGTON — Jerry Paxton watched for four months as his son labored over one handwritten college application after another. Then Jerry hit on an idea: A computer network that allows students to fill out a single application and funnel it electronically to several colleges at once.

So he created College Link, a year-old service based in Concord, Mass., that is plugging about 1,000 college applicants into the admissions offices of 400 schools, shortening the application process to a few hours.

"I asked myself, 'Isn't there possibly a better way?'" said Paxton, a former executive for a computer manufacturing company. "It's been a popular concept with the colleges." College Link works like this: students send for a $30 software package and load the software onto personal computers, or those at school. After writing essays and figuring out what information they plan to send, they enter the data into the computer as outlined by a list of instructions.

Parents investigated after baby's death

PROVO — The parents of a 3 1/2-week-old boy who died in Provo this weekend were arrested on suspicion of criminal homicide because their stories didn't match the baby's injuries.

The Salt Lake City couple apparently had stayed in a Provo motel Friday night, and Saturday morning the 21-year-old mother called police from a pay phone saying she was concerned about her baby.

The infant was taken by paramedics to the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Doctors ruled out sudden infant syndrome but were unable to determine why the child died. The state medical examiner's office is performing an autopsy.

The infant was born prematurely and didn't weigh much more than 3 pounds when he was taken to the hospital Saturday, said hospital spokesman Anton Garrity. Investigators who questioned the mother and father, 32, noticed discrepancies between the boy's condition and what his parents said had happened. The couple's identities were withheld.

Russian rocket lands on U.S. coast

GOLITSYNO II, Russia — Applause broke out Sunday in the control room of this once secret space center as a "friendship rocket" carrying religious icons and a toy stuffed dog splashed down off Washington state's coast.

The flight, dubbed Space Flight Europe-America 500, commemorates the International Year of Space and the 500th anniversary of Columbus' arrival in the Western Hemisphere.

A Soyuz rocket carrying the capsule was launched a week ago from the once-secret Plesetsk space center near the northern Russian port of Archangel. The capsule orbited earth 111 times and splashed down in the Pacific at 1:39 p.m. EST about 199 miles southwest of Seattle, said the control center's commander, Col. Anatoly Zapadinsky.

Like all Russian space flights, the friendship rocket was controlled from Golitsyno II, a city of 20,000 people about 60 miles west of Moscow. Surrounded by fences and guards, Golitsyno II was built in the late 1960s as a space center. It appears on few Russian maps.

In Seattle, officials planned receptions, art shows, and folk song and dance performances. Hundreds of Russian sailors, dignitaries and others also were expected to be on hand for the festivities.

Students can show thanks by serving

BYUSA has service projects ready for volunteers.

Giving is a sign of gratitude and there are many projects BYU students can get involved in if they want to show their gratitude by helping the hungry and homeless.

Michael Cook, a homeless and disabled Provo resident, said much of the help he receives from individuals is from others who are experiencing hard times. "Usually the ones that help are the ones who are struggling themselves," Cook said.

The majority of the help he receives however, is from various community service organizations. "I am most thankful for life and for having the facilities to help me," Cook said.

Steve Johnson, director of Utahns Against Hunger, said Utah, as compared to other states, does not have as many organizations per capita to help the homeless and hungry.

Lois Kelson, director of Homeless Services in the Community Action Agency, said, "The community as a whole needs to realize that this (homelessness and hunger) is an ongoing problem. We need donations all year round."

Kelson said the agency receives a lot of small kits for personal hygiene and grooming but the greatest need for the homeless this time of year is warm clothing. Kelson suggests donations of warm gloves, socks, hats and gloves.

Two BYU students, Holly Miller, 20, a junior majoring in piano performance from Logan, and Kim Schrank, 18, a freshman majoring in psychology from Littleton, Colo., have developed a list of service projects as part of an outreach program for their environmental biology class.

Through BYUSA, students can serve hot meals to homeless, sort donated food and clothing and help at a referral desk four times a month.

Students can work with the Community Action Agency by:

- Donating milk to children by purchasing a voucher for a gallon of two-percent milk from Smith's Food and Drug Center. The milk will be distributed to needy families with children. The agency can be contacted by calling 373-82-EXT. 3.

Students can help the United Way by:

- Collecting school supplies (tissues, pencils, crayons, paper for children of low-income families).

- Putting together a kit for babies. Include such things as diapers, diaper pins, diapers, wipes, under-shirts, lotion and powder.

- Collecting food basics for an elderly moving into a transitional living unit. Include such things as flour, shortening and condiments. The United Way can be contacted by calling 374-8108.

Thanksgiving pilgrims probably ate venison, lobster, cod, oysters

Tails are sketchy as to whether the pilgrims ate turkey as the first harvest celebration.

MEAGHAN JOHNSTON
Universe Staff Writer

Today of the year for tolerating those seen relatives, overeating and picking out for a long afternoon nap is nearing.

Though Thanksgiving is widely celebrated, few details are known about its origin. It is even sketchy about the first pilgrims ate wild turkey. The first Thanksgiving was held in 1621, and may have consisted of venison, cod, oysters and wild fowl, according to a press release from BYU communications quoting a history associate professor.

Enduring their first bitter winter, the 50-60 survivors of the Plymouth colony celebrated the day with some 90 members of a neighboring Indian tribe. The day festival was a celebration of survival and good corn crop, and wasn't even called Thanksgiving until years later.

As a harvest celebration, they gave thanks for their escape from the perils of the winter and anticipation of a good next," York said.

year," said Frank Cook, feed division manager of Moroni Feed Company.

It used to be that 70 percent of all turkey was consumed during the Thanksgiving and Christmas season. In recent years, however, the trend has shifted to 70 percent consumption year-round, with only 30 percent consumed during the holiday season, said Lynn Cook, a turkey grower.

The average American will eat 20 pounds of turkey this year, which is a sizeable increase from the 1975 statistic of 7 pounds, Frank said.

He attributes this increase to the health-conscious consumer and the wide variety of turkey products available.

"There are now more turkey products available than just the tom on the table. We make over 200 turkey products, from roasts to pastrami," Frank said.

"Many products are being refor-mulated to include turkey meat," said Dorothy Jones, supervisor of the Butterball Turkey Talkline.

Jones said besides the traditional whole body Thanksgiving turkey, turkey meat can be found in franks, bacon, sausage, ham, pastrami and cold cuts.

"It's interesting to note that 44 percent of all turkey is consumed in sandwiches," Jones said.

According to the United States Department of Agriculture, turkey is one of the best meat buys. Because it is high in protein and low in fat, it cooks quickly and there is little shrinkage during cooking.

Basted or non-basted white meat is lower in saturated fat and sodium than dark meat, Jones said. It contains less fat grams than half a teaspoon of margarine.

"Turkey is a good lean meat. It's quite popular," said Bill Thompson, manager of the BYU poultry lab.

Holidays are hard on the diet business

Dieters quit going to Diet Center, Weight Watchers because of holiday guilt, centers say.

By MICHAEL BEESON
Universe Staff Writer

Christmas has presents, Easter has baskets and Thanksgiving has food. Just by the nature of the holiday, the focus is around food. So it is no wonder so many people overeat on Thanksgiving.

"Thanksgiving is my favorite holiday. You eat, watch football and sleep," said Terry Richins, a 24-year-old senior majoring in exercise physiology from Echo.

Shane Milroy, 23, an undecided major from Rochester, N.Y., remembers the time he was in the Missionary Training Center during Thanksgiving.

"It was the same old cafeteria food, but they just tried to make it look nice, but because it was Thanksgiving, I ate a ton of food and got sick," Milroy said.

Overeating in itself is not necessarily a big problem. But for those who are dieting and have built up a discipline of eating right, the Thanksgiving meal is often the temptation that makes them quit their diets, said Becky Young, the head counselor at the Diet Center in Provo.

"It is really hard to stay motivated (to lose weight) in the holiday season when so many holiday parties and activities focus around food traditionally high in fat and sugars," said Young, who also wrote a book of low-fat and low-calorie recipes.

Between Thanksgiving and New Year's, attendance at Weight Watchers and the Diet Center drops off. In fact, according to both Weight Watchers and the Diet Center, once someone becomes frustrated in the holiday season, it is almost impossible to get that person back because they are embarrassed by weight gain or because they haven't attended the meetings.

Alyce Todd, clinical instructor in the dietetics program in the Food Science and Nutrition Department, suggests planning ahead for big holiday meals. Eating lighter the day before a big feast and increasing activity will help compensate for overeating.

"The whole holiday season is over a month long and with good planning, weight gain can be controlled. Most people who lead a healthy life throughout the year don't have anything to worry about eating too much on one day," Todd said. "The problem begins when it becomes part of their lifestyle."

Todd also noted that skipping meals before the feast is not recommended because a person will tend to eat more than normal when he or she does eat.

Todd suggests eating the Thanksgiving low-fat foods and only eating small portions of the high-fat foods like dark turkey meat and stuffing.

ROTC keeps 'Y' safe from vandalism

VICTORIA PATTERSON
Universe Staff Writer

If you had thought about vandalizing the "Y" last weekend, hopefully you had second thoughts about it or you may have come face to face to an Army ROTC cadet.

"The cadets have been guarding the 'Y' for the last few nights and are there to prevent anyone from vandalizing it during the week of the BYU football game against the U of U," said Lt. Arnold Lemmon of the University Police Department.

Between four and six cadets are taken up the mountain at 6 p.m. and leave at 6 a.m., said Bob Lauritzen, major in the United States Army and assistant professor of military science. "They sleep in sleeping bags, but one cadet is awake at all times," he said.

The cadets were issued Motorola radios by the University Police so they could call in immediately if there were any problems, Lauritzen said. They were also given gallons of hot chocolate.

Lauritzen said a cadet sighted a man during one of the nights who looked as if he was "scoping" out the "Y," but when he saw the cadet guarding it he left.

As of Friday, there have been no problems, Lauritzen said.

The guarding of the "Y" has helped assist the University Police by alleviating their officers from having to travel up to the "Y" each night, Lemmon said.

Project Uplift to spread holiday cheer

KIRK SCHAUMANN
Universe Staff Writer

Many LDS servicemen and women of the U.S. Armed Forces are far from home during the Christmas holiday.

BYUSA's Project Uplift is a program that gives students the opportunity to send one-pound care packages to those servicemen and women stationed in the United States and around the world, said Robyn Bevan, program director for Project Uplift.

BYUSA contacted the headquarters of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to locate chaplains stationed on bases throughout the world. The chaplains requested care packages for over 500 servicemen and women. Most of the requests came from chaplains stationed at basic training camps, Bevan said.

Bruce Matis, chief of restorative dentistry at Lowery Air Force Base, requested packages for 24 servicemen. Matis worked with Project Uplift while he was stationed in Germany. "I think they will be thrilled to death to know that students from BYU have taken the time to send them packages. It shows that people care about the servicemen," Matis said.

Project Uplift was started four years ago. During the Gulf War, Project Uplift sent over 1,000 packages to LDS members stationed there. BYU has had similar programs to help servicemen and women since the Vietnam

Bevan said. BYUSA will spend $2,300 postage to mail the packages to servicemen and women, Bevan said.

Students who would like to send packages can pick up boxes at the ELWC Stepdown Lounge. Packages can be dropped off Dec. 11 at either the Stepdown Lounge or on the 4th floor of the Wilkinson Center.

James Johnson, 21, from Arvada, Colo., buys some candy from Emily Foote, 19, from Dallas on Friday at the Sweet Stop.

Brerton said the candy department makes the most money from juices, candy and chips. "Bulk candy, including fudge, ranks fourth or fifth," he said.

What influences candy sales? Strangely enough, Brerton said the weather has an impact. "I don't know why, but it's busier when it's raining," he said.

Sales also escalate during holidays, especially Valentine's Day and Halloween. "Every holiday is a real busy time for us. Christmas would be better except that school gets out before the candy buying really starts," Brerton said.

Despite the growing national interest in fitness, Brerton said health foods aren't big sellers at the bookstore.

"There aren't a lot of prepackaged health foods, but I get whatever I can," Brerton said. "But the students still like their chocolate best."

Many campus candy buyers have strange habits. "Some people come (to the Sweet Stop) with one dollar and they want ten different things. And they want the total to include tax and discounts," said Sweet Stop employee Emily Foote, a junior from Dallas majoring in early childhood education and Spanish.

"Then there are the people who want you to pick all of the coffee flavored Jellie-Bellies out of the mixed jelly beans," said bookstore employee Lori Broach, a junior from Idaho Falls, Idaho, majoring in family science.

Still, Broach said it's worth it to work at the candy counter. "For one thing, we don't have to deal with irate customers. It's hard to be unhappy when you're buying candy," Broach said.

Hilary Russell plays the title role in Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler," scheduled to run through Dec. 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the Margetts Theater. Tickets available at the Drama Ticket Office.

BYU's 'Hedda Gabler' provocative, satisfying

By LISA GROVER
Universe Staff Writer

The compelling story of a woman who has "danced herself into exhaustion" has been brought to life for the BYU audience in the Norwegian classic Hedda Gabler.

The play is one of character development and exploration, leading the audience into the mind and thoughts of the main character — Hedda Gabler.

Hedda is intensely interested in controlling a human destiny, any human destiny, because she is incapable of controlling her own. She is a woman trapped by a society that will not allow her to reach her potential.

Hedda describes her one talent as being able to "bore myself to death." Hedda's discomfort and dissatisfaction slowly inexorably turns into despair, until the final, mattering end of the play.

As the play progresses, Hedda seizes every chance she has to manipulate those around her; her husband, her friends, even her lover.

Hedda reaches for beauty and power in her life, but instead finds death and ugliness.

Hilary Russell, who plays Hedda Gabler, gave a flawless performance, switching from one mood to another with conviction.

The play, though well done, may not be for everyone. Its serious tone and intellectual nature may be a turn-off for someone in search of a casual evening of light entertainment.

Those interested, however, in the plight of women at the turn of the century, serious drama buffs, and students of psychology will find this play to be a satisfying and provocative look into the life of a woman trapped by the wall she has built around herself.

The cast and director deserve high praise for a performance tightly constructed, methodical and well balanced.

Performances of "Hedda Gabler" run Tuesdays through Saturdays until Dec. 5, curtain time is 7:30 p.m. A matinee performance will be presented Nov. 30 at 4 p.m. All performances are in the Margetts Theatre.

BYU to present free concerts Tuesday

By DOLLY DORIUS
Universe Staff Writer

To usher in the Thanksgiving holiday, an evening of music at BYU is scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

The Symphony Orchestra, the Folk Ensemble and the Vocal Jazz Ensemble will each perform a free concert.

The Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Clyn Barrus and graduate assistant Christian Smith, will perform in the de Jong Concert Hall at the Harris Fine Arts Center.

The symphony is doing a really fun opening piece called "Russlan and Ludmilla," by Glinka, said Christine Nokleby, public information specialist of the Music Department.

"This piece just rips. It's a really fun, fast, exciting piece," Nokleby said.

In the Madsen Recital Hall, the Folk Ensemble will present an evening of bluegrass, folk and country music under the direction of Mark Geslison.

"This program will give BYU students an opportunity to find out what acoustic music really is and how many different forms of music are played acoustically," Geslison said.

The third concert scheduled for Tuesday will be the Vocal Jazz Ensemble performing in the Joseph Smith Building Auditorium.

Vocal Jazz Ensemble is one of the newest popular jazz music groups on campus, Nokleby said. The ensemble is under the direction of Ron Brough. Brough is also the director of the BYU Percussion Ensemble and Panoramic Steel Ensemble.

Poetry contest helps students, amateurs get works published

By ISABEL HUELVES
Universe Staff Writer

The Mile High Poetry Society is hosting a Winterfest Poetry Contest with $500 in cash prizes. Poets must submit their work by Dec. 31.

Jame Fchaul, director, said the contest is open to everyone. She said the poems can be any style or subject, however, the poems must not be over 36 lines.

Fchaul said this contest provides students with the opportunity to have their poems published in a book, which the Mile High Poetry Society publishes on a regular basis.

Mile High Poetry Society was created by four poets who wanted to help amateurs and students get their poems published.

Fchaul said the society has published five books so far.

Those interested in participating in this contest should send their entry with their name, address, phone number and a $3 entry fee to Mile High Poetry Society, P.O. Box 21116, Denver, Colo. 80221.

No. 25 BYU in the Aloha Bowl; Hancock out, Young next at QB

By TAD WALCH
Sports Editor

BYU will spend Christmas day playing football in Honolulu, Hawaii against Kansas or Oklahoma, but the turn of events that led the Aloha Bowl to invite the Cougars might have been the least noteworthy episode of a wild weekend.

BYU whipped Utah 31-22, but the score didn't come close to telling the story. Not on a day that saw BYU lose its third quarterback of the season to a major injury, tight end Byron Rex throw a 19-yard touchdown pass, head coach LaVell Edwards shove wide receiver Eric Drage, Jamal Willis become the Cougars' first 1,000-yard rusher since 1972 and Drage and one-time fourth-string QB Tom Young engage in a shouting match with assistant coach Robbie Bosco as time was running out.

Hancock called the fourth-quarter hit that appears to have torn the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee a "cheap shot" by Utah's Cedric Crawford. "I didn't think it was very classy at all," Hancock said. "Crawford was laughing. He thought it was pretty funny. We had the game put away and they want to take cheap shots, injure people and put people out for the season."

Though part of the anger he directed at Crawford was based on his belief BYU "had the game put away," Hancock refused to second guess the coaching staff for leaving him in with just six minutes remaining and BYU ahead 31-8. Edwards would only say he "was trying to win the game."

Physician Devon Nelson said Hancock's knee should return to 90 to 95 percent capability after major reconstructive surgery. "It's very likely he'll resume both his baseball and football careers," Nelson said. The injury will take six to nine months to rehabilitate, which means Hancock will miss out on BYU's baseball season — and about $500,000. He was going to be a first- or second-round pick in baseball's amateur draft in June.

"I was planning on signing (a baseball contract)," Hancock said. Now, unless a team takes a chance and makes him a late-round selection, he must prove he can again be the pitcher he was before the injury in time for the June 1994 draft — and the possibility he won't even be in the running for the starting QB.

Cougs win first game of season in 98-46 rout

By SCOTT G. CLARK
Universe Sports Writer

BYU beat the Slovenian Junior National Team in convincing fashion Saturday, opening the season with a 98-46 win in an exhibition game at the Marriott Center.

BYU held the Slovenians scoreless for the first 7:20 of the game and had a 20-point lead at half-time, before cruising to an easy victory.

Head coach Roger Reid was pleased with the team's performance, but expects Wednesday's game against Athletes In Action to be much tougher.

"We have a long way to go, but I liked what we did defensively. It was a good tuneup for us," Reid said. "Wednesday's game will be a much better test and give us a better indication of where we are at."

Ladivoj Gorjan, the Slovenian head coach, was impressed with the BYU team and the atmosphere. "BYU was perfect ... the best team we have played so far, they were very disciplined. The whole organization was very nice," Gorjan said.

The Cougars upped their lead to 56 with 3:08 left in the game.

The Cougars were led by Randy Reid (21 points), Russell Larson (17 pts, 6 rebounds), Gary Trost (13 pts), Shane Knight (11 pts, 6 rebounds) and Tony Woods (10 pts, 5 rebounds).

Senior Kevin Nixon is still out with a stress fracture and Roger Reid believes he may not return until WAC play begins in January. Freshmen guard Ryan Cuff job next season.

Edwards also declined to comment on his scuffle with Drage. In an effort to stop Drage from arguing with the officials, Edwards planted both hands in Drage's back and gave him a stiff shove toward the Cougar bench. Drage spun around to fight back, but restrained by three people and realizing who had done the pushing, he held his ground.

Drage said his actions could have cost BYU a penalty and perhaps a scoring opportunity. "It's just that I'm emotional," Drage said. "It was no big deal. We talked about it."

The second incident involving Drage came when an agitated Bosco thought Young had changed a play. "I was sticking up for (Young)," Drage said. Bosco and Drage exchanged words and Bosco shoved Drage before the two could be separated.

"I'm a captain," the junior said, "I need to keep my composure." Drage was also involved in a brouhaha with trainer George Curtis during the New Mexico game Nov. 7.

Willis ran 28 times for 148 yards, giving him 1004 for the season, but struggled to get the last few yards. At 999, he took a handoff with 2:39 left in the game and managed one yard. But on the next play, he lost two, leaving him with 998, and BYU was forced to punt.

The Cougars got the ball back with 50 seconds remaining Willis burst up the middle for six yards on the first play.

Rex celebrated heartily after his TD pass to Drage, both after the play and after the game. With Utah the Cougars' new starter, Rex said there is no question who the backup should be. "I'm better than John Walsh," he said. "I'll be ahead of him on the depth chart."

Rex saw his primary target covered before finding Drage open in the back of the end zone. Edwards related the following post-play exchange after the game:

Edwards: "That was good judgment out there."

Rex: "Yeah, I should be your quarterback."

Edwards: "It wasn't that good."

The question of a backup for Young promises to be problematic. "John Walsh is really not ready to play," Edwards said. He doesn't want to use freshman Paul Shoemaker, who is redshirting. Walk-on Chris Gulsted, who has served as the emergency QB on recent road trips, is a possibility.

bruised his knee Friday in practice, but Reid expects him back by Wednesday.

"I thought he was gone (for the season)," Roger Reid said. "I had a sick feeling the way he grabbed it. I thought it was a knee (injury)."

The Cougars announced that freshman walk-on Lance Archibald would redshirt. Walk-on Todd Bearup has left the team.

"We decided, along with his mutual consent, that it's best for him (Bearup), being his senior year, that he go ahead and get on with his life," Reid said.

The Slovenians shot just 28 percent for the game and turned the ball over 26 times.

BYU had just 12 turnovers and out rebounded the Slovenians 47-31.

The Slovenians' average age is 19.5.

feeling of Christmas

Monday night Elder Richard G. Scott of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will flip the switch that will illuminate more than 250,000 Christmas lights in an annual lighting ceremony on Temple Square in Salt Lake City. Last year's display is pictured above. The lighting ceremony is scheduled to begin at 5:30 p.m. with a special Christmas list delivered by Elder Scott. Holiday music will be performed by the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus. Following the ceremony, combined choirs from two Salt Lake area high schools will be the first to perform in a month-long series featuring choirs from area schools. Tickets are available starting mid-November for the December 11 and 12 performance of Handel's Messiah performed by the Oratorio Society of Utah and the Utah Symphony Chamber Orchestra.

Canada, U.S. Thanksgivings are similar in all but the day

Canadians celebrate their Thanksgiving on the second Monday of October.

By MICHAEL BEESON
Universe Staff Writer

In the winter of 1621, half of the Mayflower passengers who settled in Plymouth, Mass., died. The following spring, a Pawtuxet Indian named Squanto helped the Pilgrims plant corn and barley. Because of the successful harvest, the colony invited Massasoit, chief of the local tribe, to join them in their feast of duck, goose, lobsters, turkeys, corn and dried berries — probably turkey (sources disagree).

The tradition of Thanksgiving, and in 1863, Abraham Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving an annual national holiday.

But the Thanksgiving feast is not a holiday in the United States.

Colonists who settled in Nova Scotia gave thanks for their good harvest by decorating their churches with fruit and vegetables and they ate dinners of venison, waterfowl and beaver tails.

During the American Revolution, more settlers went to Canada because they wanted to remain loyal to the Queen. These settlers spread the Thanksgiving tradition to the rest of the country.

Colonial America celebrated their last harvest at the end of November, before the snow comes. But in the colder climate of Canada, the snow comes earlier and the last harvest is in October. To accommodate the change, Canada recognizes the second Monday in October as their Thanksgiving Day. The October Thanksgiving has been an official Canadian holiday since 1879.

Traditions in Canada are very similar to U.S. traditions. The kindergarten children dress up like Pilgrims and Indians, just like in the United States. They even do the hand-traced crayon turkeys.

"We do the same thing Americans do. We get together as a family and eat turkey. No difference," said Tara Banz, a 21-year-old nursing major from Raymond, Alberta.

"I think Canadians focus more on the fact that they are thankful for the harvest," said Diane Smith. Smith, 22, is a dietetics major from Champion, Alberta, a small farming community.

Aaron Simpson, 22, a public relations major, is originally from Vancouver, British Columbia, but his family has relocated to Provo. His family, though Canadian, chooses to celebrate Thanksgiving in November.

"We didn't do anything for Canadian Thanksgiving this year. We're going to celebrate it on the American Thanksgiving," Simpson said.

The biggest difference between Canada's and the United States' Thanksgiving Day is the difference in dates celebrated.

Smith summarized her feelings on the difference of the holidays by saying, "The most important thing is not the day you give thanks. The important thing is giving thanks."

You can rely on Kaplan LSAT prep.

The Roman Numerals question format, sometimes called Triple True/False, has not appeared on the LSAT since February 1991. Kaplan caught the change. Not by accident, but because we have a team of professionals dedicated to analyzing the LSAT. Kaplan updated all lectures, materials and sample tests. So you'll spend every minute and every dollar getting ready for the test that you'll actually take.

Incriminating evidence.

Look at Cracking the LSAT: 1993 Edition. Publisher: The Princeton Review. Check pps. 16, 26, 53, 72, 80, 104, 120, 147, 151, 195, 223. And especially page 47. Ignore the faint scent of mildew.

Thanksgiving break started last weekend for a few BYU students, but they will leave Wednesday for family and friends.

According to a quick campus survey last week, the majority will stay in the Utah and Salt Lake County area.

Jeff Taylor, a 24-year-old junior from New Canaan, Conn., majoring in botany, is one who will be traveling. Jeff and his fiancée, Lori, are from Fremont, Calif., and are spending Thanksgiving with her family in Portland, Ore. The highlight of their trip will be going to the Portland Temple, Jeff said. They will marry during the Christmas break.

Jeff's family tradition includes Jeff's mom putting a kernel of corn on every plate to symbolize the thankfulness in their hearts for the food they've had throughout the year, said. "It's the first thing everyone eats. Also, Thanksgiving wouldn't be Thanksgiving without traditional football games. The Dallas Cowboys and Detroit Lions are almost always on and that's what we watch. Everybody helps with the dishes."

Merena Broderick, 20, a junior in humanities, is flying home to Phoenix for the weekend. The youngest of nine children and the oldest of 40, she is looking forward to being with her family and seeing her parents, who just returned from a trip to Israel. Thanksgiving wouldn't be complete without rolls, she said. "Homemade ones, lots of them. We just have them on Thanksgiving and Christmas."

Sweet potatoes, with lots of yams, are a feast-day necessity for Laura Sellers of Rockville, Md., a year-old sophomore majoring in nursing. She will spend the holiday with a former Rockville bishop and his family who now live in Centerville.

Some students from other countries are puzzled by Thanksgiving. Gaugau Tavana of Samoa, a doctoral candidate in education, wondered what the turkey symbolized and what the purpose of Thanksgiving was. His first Thanksgiving was at the home of friends in Lehi. "I felt out of place," he said, "I had never heard of (Thanksgiving)."

"In our culture, we get together every Sunday. It's like Thanksgiving every week."

This year, the Tavanas will get together with other family members in Salt Lake City. It will be like a big family home evening, he said, with prayer and sharing past experiences and talking about home.

Thomas Appiah, 28, senior in electrical engineering, is from Ghana. His introduction to "turkey day" gave him some interesting concepts about the holiday. While serving a mission in England, elders from America served a big dinner with turkey and mashed potatoes. The rest of the day was spent in a burping contest.

As a result, until Appiah came to the United States, he thought Thanksgiving was a day to go crazy, just "eat and eat and eat. There was so much food," he said.

The Appiahs will sit down to a traditional dinner with his wife Katrina's family in Farmington this year. He has learned that Thanksgiving is "a time for families to get together and eat and have fun together and watch TV and crash."

For those who don't like to cook, wash dishes or don't have a place to go, Thanksgiving dinner will be served in the ELWC Cafeteria from 11 a.m. until 2:30 p.m., said David Keala, assistant manager of the cafeteria. There will be a choice of turkey or ham, dressing, baked or mashed potatoes and gravy, candied yams, assorted hot vegetables, a roll, tossed salad, pumpkin pie and assorted puddings for dessert and beverages — all for $5.95 plus tax. Children three to eight years of age are 50 cents per year of age. Reservations can be made at 378-3901 or diners can buy a ticket at the door, Keala said. Come early because about 1,000 were served last year. There will be TV and games in the ELWC Memorial Lounge from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Georgia pardons 2 men who fought for Cherokees

Associated Press

ATLANTA — More than 160 years after Georgia officials ignored a direct order from the U.S. Supreme Court to stop actions leading up to the infamous Trail of Tears, the state is admitting it made a mistake.

Officials on Wednesday will formally pardon two missionaries who were killed when they fought the state's seizure of Cherokee Indian land.

This is one of many injustices in Georgia, but it's something that we should do something about," said Marsha Bailey, spokeswoman for the state Board of Pardons and Paroles. "It was a miscarriage of justice."

The pardon says it "acts to remove a stain on the history of criminal justice in Georgia" and acknowledges the state usurped Cherokee sovereignty and ignored the Supreme Court.

A legislator and Cherokee descendant called the pardon a sign that Georgia finally realizes the scope of its mistreatment of the Cherokee.

If we ever had political prisoners in this state or this nation, these two were the best examples," said state Rep. Bill Dover, chief executive of the Georgia Tribe of Eastern Cherokee.

"It's been a sore place in the side of the Indian people for all these generations that these two wonderful Christian gentlemen were sent to prison because they believed in God and they believed in the Cherokee Nation," Dover said.

Samuel Austin Worcester and Elihu Butler were sentenced to four years in jail in 1831 for residing in the Cherokee Nation without a license.

A law was enacted to try to stop the two from protesting the state's seizure of Cherokee land in north-west Georgia.

Until 1828, the Cherokee Nation was considered a sovereign foreign country, with its land off limits to settlers.

But the next year, gold was discovered in Dahlonega and Georgia seized much of the land and abolished Cherokee sovereignty.

Worcester and Butler, who lived at the Cherokee capital of New Echota, attracted national attention to the Indians' cause.

President-elect Clinton has softened rhetoric

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Candidate Bill Clinton was unequivocal on China policy, adamant about lifting the ban on gays in the military, insistent on a middle class tax cut and eager to make an example of the staff-happy Congress.

President-elect Clinton says he hasn't softened his position on any of these issues. Perhaps not, but he has softened his rhetoric.

Since winning the election, Clinton's words have been more carefully chosen and more consistently diplomatic, missing many of the "either-or" campaign contrasts as he makes the transition from running to governing.

Clinton signaled the rhetorical shift in his first post-election news conference after questions about how fast he would implement major campaign promises.

"There are a lot of factual questions ... in trying to figure out how to implement all of the recommendations we made in the campaign," Clinton said.

As he answers those questions, Clinton is acutely aware his every word is now carefully scrutinized around the world and can influence financial markets.

"I think I shouldn't be hypothetical," Clinton said at the first news conference, a clear break from his campaign style of offering a list of potential answers to policy questions.

"It's a perfectly natural phase to be in now as you get closer to responsibility," said Eugene Hargrove, a Vanderbilt University professor who studies the presidency. "It's not about watering down his promises or anything. But one has to start focusing on specific things now and you have to worry about the politics and the organization."

The difference in rhetoric "may be the norm," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday." "Suddenly you have to start producing. The campaign has to end ... And I think reality sets in a little bit."

Disciplinary actions against Utah teachers up 60 percent

Associated Press

The number of disciplinary actions taken against Utah educators rose by more than 60 percent in the 11 months ending last May, an increase attributed to both greater awareness, stiffer laws and a rising number of misdeeds.

Drugs and sexual misconduct were the major reasons the teachers, administrators and certified school workers were disciplined, according to cases handled by the Utah Professional Practices Advisory Commission.

The number of educators disciplined from July 1, 1991 through May this year was 45, up from 28 in the prior 12-month period.

In the 11 months ending in May, the certificates of 16 educators were suspended, six were revoked, four educators were reprimanded and three were warned. In seven cases the complaint was dismissed, withdrawn or no action was taken. The other cases involved educators-in-training or various other actions.

Rosalie England, chairwoman of the commission, said the number of complaints has risen steadily in the four years she has been on the commission.

New state laws require law enforcement agencies to report sex crimes involving teachers to the commission, and to prevent expungement of criminal records relating to sexual violations against children.

"Districts are more aware of their responsibility to report problem cases. Teachers and the public also are more aware," England said. "But there also are more things going on."

"We have always expected teachers to have a higher standard of ethics. They have high-profile jobs and are entrusted with children. They should live exemplary lives for their students and other people," England said.

The commission also handles complaints brought against educators-in-training and decides if they should continue to work toward careers in education.
